How Do You Measure the Value of a Lake?

By Theresa Vander Woude, Clean Lakes Alliance

This summer, the Clean Lakes Alliance (CLA) is conducting lake-user surveys at 50 lakeshore sites around the watershed. The surveys are designed to evaluate people's perceptions about the quality of our lakes, determine how people are using our lakes, and ultimately measure the economic value of our lakes to the community.

The CLA survey is an "intercept survey", which means that it "catches people as they are actively engaged in a lake activity", says Paul Dearlove, Watershed Program Manager at the Clean Lakes Alliance. Survey respondents with interest in exploring these lake issues further receive an invitation from University of Wisconsin social science researchers Adena Rissman and Ben Beardmore to take a follow-up, more in-depth, online survey. Together, these two surveys will provide our community with a better understanding of the perceptions about and impacts of our lakes.

Paul adds that the intercept survey "is the first of its kind in the Madison area" and that similar surveys in other areas have "spurred additional caring, stewardship, and investment in water quality improvement projects."

Clean Lakes Alliance aims to visit each of the 50 survey sites three times a month – each visit is three hours long, which adds up to nearly 1500 hours over the summer. Paul stressed that the survey will "accept volunteers all summer long," and that the volunteer experience can be tailored to individual schedules and availability. He added, "we want to make this a good experience for volunteers, even for those who have just a few hours to give".

Survey intern Kristin Groth shared, "You end up learning a lot just by talking. You get a sense for how the community feels and views our lakes."

Our volunteers have been out surveying since Memorial Day, and we have another month to go! To sign up to administer surveys at a lakeshore location near you, please contact Paul at paul@cleanlakesalliance.com or (608) 255-1000. Volunteers will complete a short training, and be provided a volunteer t-shirt and all survey materials.

BCNA July 14, 2014 Meeting Summary

By Carol Medaris

The meeting was called to order at 6:30 by Judy Robinson.

TRAFFIC ON COLBY: Clayton Murray, a parent of a student at Woodland Montessori, led a discussion about the dangerous situation created for the school's students, especially while being dropped off and picked up before and after school. A group working on this wants to touch base with neighbors about possible solutions before beginning the approval process and is considering a number of traffic calming devices such as speed bumps on Colby and/or Van Deusen, narrowing the road with curb extensions, and a four-way stop sign. Clayton welcomes suggestions and comments at clayton.t.murray@gmail.com; 608/443-6813.

ALLIANT ENERGY CENTER DEVELOPMENT PLAN INTERVIEWS: Bob Stoffs reported on the Center's scheduling of a series of interviews with neighborhood representatives to discuss the feasibility of long-term development plans it is contemplating. The Center wishes to meet with three representatives of the neighborhood on July 25th. Jody Clowes contacted Bob; she plans to attend and hopes that others will, as well. Ron Shutvet and several others indicated an interest in going, but the general feeling was that a well-publicized public meeting would be a much more productive way to get real input. In addition, it was felt that people being interviewed this way could hardly be said to be "representative" of the neighborhood. There was no advance notice that representation was being sought nor was there any indication of what the Center has in mind.

BYLAWS REVISION: Ron Shutvet said that he and Linda Bauman had not had time to meet to prepare the final revisions for a vote pursuant to discussions at previous meetings. He noted that there were still two sections we'd not been able to reach agreement on: Article III.1.2.1 (posting agendas) and Article VII.4 (notice for large expenditures). We again discussed the choice between "shall" and "may" when providing for notice and what options we had for getting the notices out: the newsletter only comes out every other month and not everyone who may be interested in these issues is on the email list-serve, although Jim Winkle noted that the list-serve list has grown substantially. Using our newsletter distribution system for special notices involves time constraints as well as cost and distribution issues.

[Editor's note: The proposed bylaw changes and explanations are on the Bay Creek website, baycreekmadison.org]

CELEBRATE SOUTH MADISON: Bob Stoffs announced that this annual event is scheduled for August 23rd at the South Madison Labor Temple from 11 to 7 with food, music, and lots of enjoyable activities for children and adult residents of the neighborhood. Attendees were encouraged to mark their calendars!

TREASURER'S REPORT: Judy Robinson presented the treasurer's report with details on the use of the $6000 grant from the city and $5899 raised in donations for our new neighborhood sign and landscaping across from the pool. The report will be posted on our website. Volunteers worked hard on the tree planting, weeding and other landscaping and are just about done. Nice work!

FOOT REPORT AND OTHER MATTERS: 1) Ron Shutvet described an historic photographic panorama of the Bay Creek Neighborhood that was presented at the FOOT ice cream social and was very well-received. It will be displayed again at the Clean Lakes Festival July 26th at Law Park 11 a.m.-3 p.m. 2) The Full Moon Run on August 6th will assemble at Bernie's Beach at 8:30 and start at 9:00 p.m. 3) Yoga at the Olin Park Pavilion is 5:30, Thursday, July 17th and continues every other Thursday. 4) A dance series will be starting at Olin in September (see page 5 for more info).

Cathryn Hatle agreed to facilitate our September meeting. The meeting was adjourned at 7:45.

King of Falafel on Park Street

By Sara Richards

A gas station may be an unlikely locale for mid-Eastern food but it's a hit with the neighbors and with gas station patrons. Meshel Aldae is the proprietor of this takeout restaurant in the Amstar station at the corner of Park and Olin. His warm personality and clear enthusiasm for good food permeate the small, neat establishment. Service is prompt and the menu is varied.

Meshel left Kuwait 18 years ago to attend school in Wisconsin. Then he married and worked as a translator. He loved to cook for family and friends so he agreed to prepare food for over a hundred people on a friend's birthday. Guests were very impressed and urged him to open a restaurant so he did "with absolutely no background in how to run a restaurant." King of Falafel was a popular downtown spot and now exists as a food cart on the Square.

But why in a gas station on Park Street? He is a friend of the owner who kept urging him to open another restaurant. Meshel told him, "If you build it, I will open it" and his friend did—to our benefit.

His Egyptian style falafel is made from scratch. The garbanzo beans are soaked, boiled, ground and shaped. Egyptian-style falafel has a green interior from vegetables mixed with the beans as opposed to other Mediterranean falafel with a brown or a grey interior. He believes in fresh food and stresses that many of his native foods are quite healthy. He cited hummus (garbanzo and tahini paste) and tabbouli (parsley, lemon, olive oil, and bulgar wheat) as examples. The way the meat is cooked for gyros on a vertical spit permits much of the fat to drip off as it's cooked.

The recipes used are his own (except for his mother's lentil soup). The menu features appetizers, salads, sandwiches and entrees. Some intriguing items are kibee balls which are meat croquettes and fattoosh which is a tasty salad with vegetables and toasted pita squares. Grape leaves stuffed with rice have a nice lemony tang. Sandwiches are available with beef, lamb, or chicken. Vegetarian options are falafel and eggplant with potato. There is also Italian beef on request; it's not listed on the regular menu. The lunch special between 11 a.m. and 3 p.m. is hard to beat at $9 for two sandwiches, two orders of fries, and two sodas.

The restaurant is currently open 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Monday through Saturday. Meshel said he is considering opening earlier at the request of construction workers who like to pick up lunch at the restaurant. He said there is a line by 10:30 in the morning.

Don't feel like cooking? Stop in to pick up lunch or supper. I can personally attest that the falafel sandwich is delicious. Don't be afraid to order it with the pickles on it.

Do you have a favorite neighborhood restaurant to tell us about?

Please write a review and send it to Sara Richards (see back page for contact info).

MMoCA to Offer Docent Training This Fall By Erika Monroe-Kane, Director of Communications

The Madison Museum of Contemporary Art (MMoCA) invites open-minded, interested individuals to become docents. Docent training prepares people to facilitate engaging conversations and explorations of modern and contemporary art. The training is held at MMoCA, 227 State Street, from 1 to 3:30 p.m. on Tuesdays, Sept. 23 - Dec. 16.

During the twelve-week training course, docent trainees will learn about modern and contemporary art, art media and processes, behind-the-scenes museum operations, tour techniques, and more; a background in art and art history is not required.

Docents receive benefits such as private exhibition orientations with artists and curators and a 20% discount at MMoCA's award-winning Museum Store. There is no course fee beyond a $25 cost for training materials. Docents should also become members of the museum at the individual level.

For more information, visit mmoca.org and click Get Involved/Docent Program, or contact Sheri Castelnuovo, curator of education, at 608.257.0158 or sheri@mmoca.org. Applications must be received by Sept. 5, 2014.

Bay Creek Calendar of Events By Jim Winkle

There's an easy way to get reminders via email and even hear about neighborhood events that aren't in the newsletter. The Bay Creek website at baycreekmadison.org has a "Calendar" section devoted to neighborhood events. This includes BCNA meetings and other events in the neighborhood like free concerts organized by Friends of Olin-Turville. It also includes events that don't make it into the newsletter because of time constraints such as a candidate forum or last minute agenda items at the bimonthly meetings.

Events Listings: All upcoming events are listed in chronological order with the current events at the top. Events are categorized; to view events in just one category click on the category name; for example, click on "Meetings" to see just meetings.

Email Reminder: You can subscribe to get email reminders of events, either all events or just events in certain categories. If you want reminders for all events, simply enter your email address in the box and click the "Subscribe" button. If you want reminders for just events in certain categories, click on "Reminders", select the categories in which you are interested, enter your email address and click the "Subscribe" button. Either way, you'll receive an email letting you know your subscription was successful.

Adding an Event: Anyone can add an event to the Calendar. If you want to let the neighborhood know about a block cleanup or your rummage sale, click "Add Event", fill out the short form, and click "Save Event" at the bottom. If you change your mind, it's easy to unsubscribe later; instructions come with every email. If you don't have a computer, you can periodically check the Calendar using a computer at the library.

The café evening begins at 7:00 p.m. While it officially ends at 9:00, the music often lasts until 9:30 or 10:00. The musical evenings take place in the coffeehouse's new front room, which has been turned into a cozy bar, with soft drinks, wine, an interesting and frequently changing selection of tap beer, and light snacks. Although people come from all over the city, the events are increasingly becoming a meeting place for neighborhood residents. Freedom Riders, with Dr. Craig Werner

Attracting a diverse group of volunteers, black and white, young and old, male and female, secular and religious, northern and southern, the Freedom Rides of 1961 took the civil rights struggle out of the courtroom and onto the streets of the Jim Crow South. Freedom Riders tells the terrifying, moving, and suspenseful story of a time when white and black volunteers riding a bus into the Deep South risked being jailed, beaten, or killed, as white local and state authorities ignored or encouraged violent attacks. The film includes previously unseen amateur 8-mm footage of the burning bus on which some Freedom Riders were temporarily trapped, taken by a local twelve-year-old and held as evidence since 1961 by the FBI.

On Wed., Aug. 13 from 6:30-8:00 p.m. at the Goodman South Madison library, Dr. Craig Werner, a literature professor with the UW-Madison Department of Afro-American Studies, will show clips from the film and lead a discussion about some of the issues raised in the film, how the struggle relates to issues we are facing today, and the importance of music in the Civil Rights movement.

News from Olin-Turville

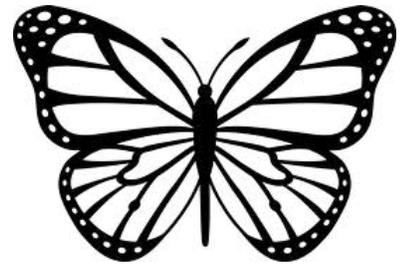

By Andria Blattner

Phenology is coming to the Bay Creek Orchard near the new sign! Specifically it will be in the form of two little lilac bushes. In case you don't know, the word "phenology" is simply the observation of the seasonal change. We do this all the time, especially in the spring as we note the coming of the ducks, geese, loons and then the warblers. The flowers bloom in an order, too, from early spring all throughout the summer, ending with the tall prairie plants, coneflowers, cup plants and goldenrods blooming into the fall. All these cycles are tied to the seasons, climate and weather. It becomes a science when the data is actually recorded and compared from year to year and from place to place and the interconnections are examined.

Two early recorders of native plant flowering times were Henry David Thoreau 1852 to 1858 and Aldo Leopold 1935 to 1945. Recent research at the UW-Madison (Stan Temple) and Harvard have shown that blooming native plants occurs up to a month earlier and predicted the record warm spring of 2012 would have an even earlier blooming time, which it did. The Aldo Leopold Foundation is a leader in phenological research.

In this day of the internet a great many individuals are contributing to recording phenological data. Journey North is a website with at least 10 projects geared for kids, including following the Monarch Migrations.

The Lost Lady Project and the Firefly Watch are trying to determine the status of two species of insects. Their websites explain how to contribute information to these projects. (The first firefly I saw this year was in the Turville Prairie on May 31.) The DNR has a nice website that highlights what we in Wisconsin can expect to see each month. It is EEK, environmental education for kids (dnr.wi.gov/EEK). Editor's Note: See notice from EEK website below.

But back to our lilac bushes. The USA National Phenological Network tracks an incredible number of things and has great maps and visualization tools. One of their studies uses cloned cultivars thus eliminating any effects of genetic variation. Our cultivar is Syringa Chinensis Red Rothomagensis. We will be able to add data to this massive undertaking.

You can see the seasons change in Turville Conservation Park on the second Saturday nature walks. On August 9th Sean Gere will lead a walk on the trees in the park. I'm sure he will have a lot to say about ash trees. By October 11 we will definitely be into fall – hard to believe.

Bluebird Trail Report: We have had 20 bluebirds successfully leave the nest. That was in 5 nests with 2 having 2 broods. There is still one nest with 4 blue eggs. Tree swallows did better with 28 fledglings for 8 nests.

Wanted: Kid Artists and Writers (from dnr.wi.gov/EEK)

Do you like to draw, write, or spend time outdoors? EEK! is looking for your help. We're on the lookout for kids' artwork - pictures of nature and outdoor recreation. We also want to hear about your big fish stories and any cool stuff you've seen outdoors. Artwork and stories can be sent to EEK!, c/o Carrie Morgan, OC/2, Department of Natural Resources, P.O. Box 7921, Madison, WI 53707. If you go to the EEK website (dnr.wi.gov/EEK), there is a link where you can e-mail EEK! your seasonal observations, too.

Bay Creek Bulletin information The Bay Creek Bulletin is published every other month by the Bay Creek Neighborhood Association (BCNA) and is a news and information service for the neighborhood. History of the Summer Vacation by Rachael Stark (from infoplease.com)

Why does the American school year start in September and end in June? It's something of a mystery. Did children once "bring in the harvest" on the family farm all summer in the distant rural past?

Historians at Old Sturbridge Village, a living history museum that recreates an 1830s New England farming village, say not. According to the web site and schoolmistress there, farm children went to school from December to March and from mid-May to August. Adults and children alike helped with planting and harvesting in the spring and fall.

What did you do on your summer vacation?
Did you take a once in a lifetime trip, find a fantastic new campsite or discover a new bike trail? Maybe you read a great book, attended a family reunion or had a movie marathon.

If you'd like to tell us about it, please contact Sara Richards at
